

David Mullings

Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, Blue Mahoe Holdings, Inc.

David Mullings, a Jamaican investor and philanthropist, is the founder and chair of Blue Mahoe Holdings, a private impact investment firm focused primarily on the Caribbean. The firm is planning to list their core holding, Blue Mahoe Capital, on the NASDAQ in late 2025.

A dynamic and forward-thinking businessman, Mullings has positioned himself and his companies to be catalysts that can revolutionize business—not just in the United States, but also in Jamaica, the Caribbean, and the African Diaspora. Along with innovative business practices, he prioritizes educating others on how triple bottom line investing works to generate profits while benefiting people and being planet-positive. The Mullings Family Foundation committed to endow a $2.5 million matched scholarship for Miami Herbert Business School students focused on Caribbean economic development.

Mullings began his career at Jamaica National Building Society, holding various positions, most notably as part of the marketing and business development team, where he helped design investment, mortgage, and savings products and oversaw electronic channels for the entire group, launching their internet banking platform. Immediately before launching Blue Mahoe, Mullings worked for Left Brain Capital Management, a Chicago-based long-biased hedge fund.

Mullings received the 2021 American Foundation of the University of the West Indies Chancellor's Award for Business Excellence, and was the first Future Leaders Representative for the USA on the Jamaica Diaspora Advisory Board, and a weekly columnist for the Jamaica Observer. He serves as president-elect of the University of Miami Alumni Board of Directors, and on the Latin America and Caribbean Initiatives Advisory Board at the Miami Herbert Business School, in addition to serving on the board of directors for the Institute of Caribbean Studies in Washington, D.C., and on the boards of numerous organizations and companies in the USA and Jamaica. He is a proud Forbes Council member and contributor.

Mullings graduated from the University of Miami with a Bachelor of Science degree at a the age of 19. He then played soccer with Real Mona F.C. in Jamaica, and completed his M.B.A. at the U with concentrations in marketing and international business.