Juliana Wheeler is a marketing and communications consultant with more than 20 years' experience. She advises a variety of clients in professional and financial services, natural resources and technology industries on media relations, crisis management, reputational risk and internal communications strategies.

Juliana lived in London for 25 years, where most recently she was Head of Financial Communications at the Church of England. In that role, she managed and delivered communications and media strategies for the 300-year-old, £10.5 billion Church Commissioners endowment, a leading global responsible investor; and for the Church of England Pensions Board, which ethically manages more than £4 billion of pensions assets. Among other initiatives, she led communications for the Church Commissioners' research into its links to historic transatlantic slavery and developed communications for the Church of England's role in King Charles III's coronation.

Previous roles include senior marketing and communications positions at J.P. Morgan, Barclays, LCH (now part of the London Stock Exchange Group) and Panmure Gordon (now Panmure Liberum), a British stockbroker majority owned by private equity firm Atlas Merchant Capital. In these roles she advised senior management and boards on corporate crises and reputational issues and managed all media and public relations for M&A, capital markets transactions, leadership transitions, internal communications, and day to day corporate news.

She began her career as a journalist at Bloomberg and the Financial Times.
