

KERRI L. BARSH, J.D. '84

Shareholder and Co-Chair of Environmental Practice, Greenberg
Traurig

Kerri L. Barsh is co-chair of Greenberg Traurig's Environmental Practice and a member of its Executive Committee. Barsh represents public and private clients in an array of environmental regulatory, permitting, and litigation matters, including transactional support and due diligence, climate change, energy and infrastructure projects, wetlands and coastal permitting, environmental assessment and liability matters, complex land use projects, indoor air quality (mold), hazardous materials cleanup, and other compliance and enforcement cases. In the past eight years, she has appeared three times before the U.S. Supreme Court.

During her career, Barsh has represented clients in several high-profile matters across her various practice areas, including Lake Belt area permitting, the Port of Miami tunnel, and the Amillarah private floating islands project.

As a member of Greenberg Traurig's Executive Committee, Barsh contributes to the firm's overall strategic initiatives and participates in the major decisions regarding its operations. Her work has garnered recognition by leading legal publications, including the Lawdragon 500 Leading U.S. Environmental and Energy Lawyers guide for 2021; The Best Lawyers in America, which named her "Lawyer of the Year, Miami Litigation–Environmental Law" in 2013 and 2022; the Chambers USA Guide, 2007-2021; and The Legal 500 United States, 2016-2021.

Barsh earned her J.D., magna cum laude, from the University of Miami School of Law. She is based in Greenberg Traurig's Miami office.
